During the course of two meetings, the task force developed questions related to admission traffic rule for the PTCAS Work Group to consider.

STUDENT SURVEY: The task force decided not to create a separate survey for currently enrolled physical therapist students because they were too far removed from the admissions process.

APPLICANT SURVEY: During the March 26 meeting, the task force recommended the following questions be included in the 2013-14 PTCAS Applicant Survey scheduled for release in May 2014. The PTCAS Work Group will have an opportunity to review the items before the survey is finalized.

PROGRAM SURVEY: The task force developed questions for all physical therapist education programs, including those that do and do not participate in the Physical Therapist Centralized Application Service (PTCAS). The questions will be grouped under three main headers: (1) Current Scope of the Problem, (2)
Current Program Admissions Policy and Procedure, and (3) Program Attitudes toward Traffic Rules. Final questions and drop-down options may differ in final survey. See Appendix A.

Data captured by PTCAS regarding start dates, deposit requirements, deposit amounts, early decision, and interviews will be matched to the data submitted by programs in response to the survey. The survey will include a preface or introductory statement that describes the purpose of the survey and defines admissions traffic rules. The statement is intended to eliminate any confusion about the terminology. The program survey also will include questions about the institution to help the task force determine if certain types of programs or regions experience problems with the admissions process more acutely than other programs.

TRAFFIC RULE ASSIGNMENTS: The chair of the task force assigned each member of the task force two broad traffic rule areas and charged them to review related traffic rules for other associations and begin to consider what traffic rules might apply to physical therapist education programs. See Appendix B.

TASK FORCE CHARGE: The ACAPT Board will look to this task force to:
- Make recommendations on admission traffic rules that all physical therapist programs will follow
- Make recommendations on PTCAS procedures, including admission codes

The goal of the Task Force’s recommendations is to improve the admission process for programs and applicants through increased transparency of admission decisions and additional processes that would provide timely and accurate information to applicants and programs.

ACAPT BOD Conference Call Report

2014 Federal Advocacy Forum Update

I attended APTA’s 2014 Federal Advocacy Forum in early April. The focus of this year’s visits to the Hill were the 1) Therapy Cap, 2) PT Workforce, and 3) Physician Self-Referral topics and related legislation. You can find more detail about the programming and handouts at: http://www.apta.org/FederalForum/ Lindsay Still also sent the following information that you might find helpful for advocacy efforts back in your respective states:

Physical Therapy Advocacy at Home – How You Can Make a Difference

Now that the Federal Advocacy Forum is over it is time to follow-up with your legislators at home. The House and Senate are in recess from April 14-25. Take this time to set-up a district meeting or attend a local town hall.

APTA, in conjunction with the Congressional Management Foundation, has created two videos to help you prepare for your district meetings:

Strategies for Building Relationships with Lawmakers Back Home
Way Outside the Beltway: District Directors on the Dos and Don’ts of District Activities

You can view upcoming town hall meetings under the Resources tab in the Legislative Action Center. If you do not have time to attend a town hall or schedule a meeting with your legislator, send an email asking your legislators to repeal the therapy cap, close the self-referral loophole, and add physical therapists to the list of providers eligible for the National Health Service Corps loan repayment program.

If you have questions or need the contact information for your legislator’s district scheduler contact Lindsay Still at advocacy@apta.org. Your colleagues worked hard in Washington, DC this week advocating for the profession, now it is time to follow-up back home. Let’s keep the #PTAdvocacy momentum going!

The Congressional Management Foundation also has several great resources if you have not checked out their webpage at: http://www.congressfoundation.org/

I was at the Forum to represent ACAPT, however, my visits to the Hill were in the context of representing Maine. Maine’s legislators are supportive of items 1 and 2 above, although Senator Collins is not currently a co-sponsor of the Therapist Workforce bill as she has been in the past. All of the legislators/staff really seemed to react negatively to the self-referral topic (that was my gut sense). I welcome discussion about the ongoing liaison role of ACAPT and this Forum.

Respectfully submitted.

DISCUSSION GUIDE FOR CLIN ED CONSORTIA: Plan to develop this week or next based on presentations / discussions that were recently held at Ohio State.

Summary of Papers (excerpt from opening introductory remarks):

There are several themes that resonate throughout the papers. The first is the consistent presentation of the best available evidence. Some of this evidence comes from published physical therapy research, other evidence comes from other professions, and much is based on expert opinion and past experiences. Additionally, the importance of the relationship between academic and clinical faculty within academic and clinical institutions is a common theme throughout. All of the papers have clinical faculty as co-authors, and all but one have authors representing more than one academic institution. Lastly, all of the papers encourage us to look at what could be in clinical education, through a range of examples from within our profession as well as across other professions.

Jette et al provide a strong argument for reaching consensus on best practices, providing a framework for discussion through presentation of a model that suggests quality be viewed in terms of effective structures, processes, and outcomes. These components of quality are articulated throughout all of the papers you are about to read. Jette et al also review current clinical education practices in PT education and in other disciplines and make recommendations for us to consider.

Following the model described by Jette et al are 2 articles focused on curricular structure. Wruble-Hakim et al propose that academic program curricula be structured with integrated clinical experiences that build on stronger partnerships with clinical sites, while Rapport et al propose a standardized curriculum that culminates with a year-long internship. Rapport et al describe what a pre and postgraduate internship model may look like; however, they do not advocate for either. Although both papers address curricular structure, the positions expressed in these papers can be considered individually or in combination with each other.

The next 2 papers are focused on the process of partnership between academic programs and clinical sites. Applebaum et al describe development of closer, more intimate, relationships between academic programs and a small core of clinical and community partners who work together to provide clinical education consistent with their institutional missions. McCallum et al describe cooperation and collaboration among academic programs, clinical sites, and a regional office that work together to meet clinical education needs across a region. Although both are referred to as “networks,” each paper presents a unique idea that again can be considered in isolation or in combination with the other.

Recker-Hughes et al summarize what is known about quality clinical teaching and clinical teaching environments today. They articulate necessary qualifications of CIs and practice settings that are essential for quality clinical education, as well as outline a desired developmental process for continued growth of each. In addition, they make recommendations for all involved stakeholders to move us toward higher quality clinical education. Lastly, Deusinger et al implore us to consider the opportunities that exist within our current environment. They argue that factors like health care reform and the prevalence of chronic health conditions present new opportunities that challenge us to consider our notions of traditional clinical sites, acceptable clinical teachers, and typical patients, along with interprofessional opportunities.
